

4.2.1: Library Automation-Integrated

The library is fully automated through CampesiLIB –Version 4.5.0(Computerized Academic Management Processing and Expert System Information Library) software that is installed to accommodate the following activities of the library.

Multi-user centralized Database applications can be accessed. The main objective of the library automation is to speedily dispose library work, establishment of good storage and retrieval system and time and human power saving with quality service.

Library automation reduces the time for cataloguing, circulation and acquisitions. It also helps the student community in the effective use of library with quick retrieval of resources.

It consists of the following modules:

Bar-coding: In an automated environment every document should be unique and searchable. It is done through bar coding. Bar coding facilitates the searching, circulation and systematic shelving of the concerned document. After entering all the details regarding the documents into the database, barcodes are printed on adhesive labels according to the accession number of the document. For this process we using zebra barcode software and zebra thermal printer are used. The polyester barcode label is pasted on the lower bottom of the title page and last page of the book. User ID card contains bar-coded library reference number of the student and staff.

Circulation Control: The user has to bring the ID card to the library at the time of issue, return, renewal and reservation of resources. The barcode reads his/her identity card. Then the system shows the required details. The process of issue is completed by scanning the barcode label and the issue details sent to the respective user ID. The book details are automatically entered by the barcode reader by reading the barcode label on the title page of the book. When the book is returned, its barcode label is read by the barcode reader and details such as due date, fine details etc. are saved.

Master Module:

The master module consists of user master, book master, journal master, CD's entry master, back volume master, publisher master, vendor master, issue/return and reports. All the data entered can be edited and updated.

Report Management Module:

This module is designed to generate and print a large number of reports such as utilization report, books issued and return report, bibliography reports, book reports categorized by accession number, author, subject, department, supplier and publisher, title, availability etc. It also generates book unique title reports etc.
